Berbie Smith was led to school by the ar yesterday morning; Freidle Shepard sent without the ear gaff and he had his use bloodled; Harriet Corson, she carried oh of dahlias on top of her books ey yelled things at Harriet. All of which were incidents in the great strike of the pupils of Class 8B in Public School bie wanted to be with the strikers it was only after he came home at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and said that he was not going to be a scab scholar at his mamma took him by the ear and led im back to his seat in the red brick schoolse out at the end of East Twenty-sixth But as for Freddie Shepard and t Corson, they were out and out rs. Harriet would have got her se bloodied too if she weren't a sissy; it was, that Corson girl won't be spoken too as long as she lives by any of the other pupils in the graduating class at No. 88.

Take it from the strikers that this is really serious thing, this strike. They made up their minds to quit last Friday and out of the whole class of twenty-five boys and eight girls there were only those three, Herbie, Freddie and Harriet, who at in their seats yesterday and recited ry, English and things. The rest me around by the fence back of the ol and yelled until a cop came and chool and yelled until a cop-chased them away. You bet they showed fr. George Tappan, the principal, that they meant business.

The whole thing started all of a sudden st Friday when Miss Kate A. Drumgcul, cher of the 8Bs, received a notice of transfer from the Board of Education. The notice said that she should give up the position which she had held for twelve rears in School 98 and remove to No. 39, down on Avenue C in Flatbush. The age was to take effect immediately.

Well, Miss Drumgoul had tears in her eyes all Friday and when some of the girls went up and asked her what was the matter at the noon recess she told them. The girls told the boys and the boys thought that it was necessary to make some declarations of independence. So Friday afternoon, when he ought to have been studying his civil government, Richard Le Seur wrote out a lot of whereases and whyfores just like Thomas Jefferson once did and he circulated it around among all the class to be signed. That paper said that whereas Miss Drumgoul had always been a fine teacher and whereas she was greatly beloved by her pupils and whereas she was only 32 years old and had been teaching in No. Sever since it was built, and three more whereases, therefore be it resolved that the loyal pupils of 8B wouldn't come back to school until Miss Drumgoul was reinstated as teacher in her old classroom. After, school let out that afternoon Richard walked right up to Mr. Tappan's office while the committee of protest Well, Miss Drumgoul had tears in her office while the committee of protest needed around from the top of the stairs and Richard put that paper of declara-tions of independence into Mr. Tappan's dons of independence into Mr. Tappan s handa and walked right out, quick but dignified.

All the youngsters in the seventh and sixth grades heard what Richard had done when they were on the sidewalk in front and they heard about the trouble over Miss Drumgou! too. So they went and got excited like all the rest. One of them on the way home down Fast Twenty-seventh street stopped and wrote with chalk on the sidewalk:

Tappan, Tappan.

So when Monday morning came nobody showed up in 8B except those three, the sissy, the sissy kid and poor Herbie, whose mother brought him by the ear. When Freddie Shepard came out at noon he knew what was going to happen to him all right and he wished he'd brought his lunch. The boys caught him and punched him hard.

ceen Mr. Tappan and Mr. Tappan had said that there really wasn't any trouble at all; that a few of the big boys had "intimidated" some of the small ones, but that most of the members of 8B were in their seats all day. More than that, he said that Miss Drumgoul had been transsaid that Miss Drumgoul had been transerred by the board and she wasn't coming

The skinny fellow who works for the papers told the gang that Mr Tappan 'd said there wasn't any strike at all. "Huh!"
